

Amanda Papir

Amanda Papir is a Senior Manager at Social Impact Exchange supporting the Education and Transforming Philanthropy Affinity Groups.

Amanda has built a career designing for social impact, managing teams and operations, and cultivating strategic partnerships with leaders and agencies across government, civil society and the private sector.

Prior to joining SIE, Amanda worked for the 92nd Street Y, New York, directing the Newmark Civic Life Project, a pro-democracy, social impact initiative engaging global thought leaders and everyday citizens on critical issues facing the U.S.

She also served as Deputy Director of the Association for a Better New York, a civic non-profit and advocacy group for all employers in New York City.

Amanda received her MPA from Columbia University's School of International and Public Affairs. She currently resides in Westchester with her spouse and two children.
